

I wish you a good day!

Brevity is the soul of wit, we say. May the questions in this lesson nourish your wit.

- Whoever says: „I must“ implies at the same time “I do not want to”.
- Whoever says: „I do not want to” evokes experiences that will eventually lead to willingness.
This will be so – until ?
- Are you on a spiritual path? Or on the path to awakening?
- What is the difference between the two and with what consequences?
Which path do you prefer and why?
- Is the Self different from the Ego? If yes, how and why? If not, why not?
- Who or what is I?

I am no longer willing to “discuss” with you your woes, thoughts, or questions about the path or about you on the path via e-mail. If they are important enough to you then ponder them inside in silence as long as necessary, or phone me.

If you do not reach me - leave a message letting me know that you wish to talk to me.

As practical as e-mailing or texting (SMS) may be - most people are not aware of the loss implied. I do no longer want to contribute to this loss.

I greet you in His all-encompassing love!

Christa
